For what MS has done, they deserve far more punishment than they are receiving in this settlement. It also appears to me that these conditions will do little to prevent similar behavior in the future. There is also the troubling matter of MS's unwillingness to cooperate with external parties to provide adequate security for its products. Given their ubiquity, this is a public health and national security concern. These settlement conditions are simply too favorable to MS, and too weak to provide protection to non-MS entities.
